- F-3 4. During mid-September eight fighters were permanently assigned to the Nanning Airfield. They averaged one scheduled flight per week between Nanning and Hankow and several flights per month between Nanning and Kunming. The highway connecting Nanning with the airfield had a security check point halfway between the field and the city. The former Nanning Military Academy at the side of Nanning Airfield was being used as a training center for Democratic Republic of Vietnam guerrilla staff members. Students were subject to inspection when passing the check point between the city and the field.
- F-3 5. During mid-September 220 technicians of the Chinese Communist Air Force, accompanied by 30 surveyor's instruments and 300 large cases of equipment, arrived in Canton on a special train from Hankow. They were met at the Ta Sha T'ou (大沙頭) Station in Canton by 70 representatives of the Kwangtung Military District Command and the Canton Municipal government. They were sent, with the tripods and instruments, to White Cloud Airfield, where they were to be billeted. The cases of equipment were unloaded at the Sha Ho (沙河) Station in Canton. The mission of these air force technicians was to install night landing facilities at airfields along the Kwangtung coast and to make these fields serviceable for jets.

Hong Kong

6. During mid-August the Chinese Communists were strengthening air defense facilities at Tientsin. Radar and anti-aircraft guns were installed. The Tientsin Chemical Industrial Raw Material Plant and other factories were to be removed to districts outside of Tientsin.
